This is the stuff the Democratic organs publish on the eve of a Presidential election, to aggravate sectional excitement, and to South. Mr. Yancey made the same charge, in his speech at Pike's Opera-house, and inquired if he was not correct in including Ohio, when some flunkey on the stage said she had done it, but the nullifying acts had been repealed. It is enough to make a man pack up his traps and move into a slave State, to see miserable flunkies tolerated in a public meeting, who will get up and bear false witness against their own State, and indorse an ignorant and false statement made by a sectional agitator against the whole North. They do not have this in the South. There no man would wenture, in a popular assembly, to accuse his own State; and especially to indorse an accusation made by a speaker from another section. It is this abasement of their own section that has brought the great Democratic party to itsthe result might suggest the wisdom of a change of policy. But it seems that the concern has get below any recuperative power, and the only course is one of continued debasement.

If manfood, self-respect, love of country and jealousy of its honor, are inseparable from slavery, for Heaven's sake let us have slavery in Ohio. There is nothing in the condition of betweenity which we give the negro here-neither free man nor protected by the relation of master and servant, which seems to be the culmination of our negro philanthropy-that will begin to compensate for the loss of manhood in the white race. The instinct of self-preservation is just as lawful in races as in individuals, and if we must have slaves, to save white politicians from taking on the spirit of slaves, let us have the negro slaves, and preserve our manhood, and end sectional agitation at once. For our part, we go for slavery in Ohio as a means of developing the white race into a condition of superiority.

How can any Northern State nullify the Fugitive-slave Law? Any man of sense knows it can not be done. Nor is it done. There is no administration of any law which involves personal liberty, that is so sure and successful as the seizure of fugitives. Onio is included in the States that have once nullified the law, but seizures of slaves are almost invariably successful in Ohio. There was one rescued at Wellington last year, but we believe it was shown that the seizure had not even the slight warrant which the fugitive law requires. The rescuers thought so, at any rate. But, about thirty respectable men were imprisoned most excessively for that offense; so the fugitive law was triumphant,

The legislation of Ohio, which the swift State's-evidence at the Opera-house called nullification, was, we presume, a sample of the whole. It merely forbid the use of Ohio jails for the confinement of fugitive slaves, The law was a foolish one, for it defeated its own purpose. The claimants dare not put their seizures in jail, for fear of habeas corpus. But the principle on which the fugitive law is founded, and the one carried out in all its details, is, that no portion of its execution shall be entrusted to the States, but that the Federal provision shall be complete and ad-

The claim that the execution of this constitutional provision is intended to be left by the Constitution to the States, is the ground which the ultra Abolitionists take, and that is called nullifying the Constitution. But the same blind partizan howl about its being nullification for the States not to provide for executing the same law. In their bullheaded haste to accuse their own States, they place themselves on the same ground as the abolitionists, who are such terrible nullifiers to them. If these politicians and editors would commit physical, as often as they do logical suicide, there would be a vast improvement in the politics of the country. Mr. Vancey knew nothing of what he was talking. He comes from a State where an escape to a free border is almost impossible to a slave, as a pilgrimage to Rome; and yet he talks of secession because the Fugitive Law is pullified. Kentucky with a frontier of 300 miles exposed to free soil, can exist in the Union, and on civil terms with the neighboring free States; but Alabama, 500 miles from a free border, and where they never lose a slave, except to their own swamps, can not stay in the Union because the fugitive law is nullified; and once in a while she must get up the terrible farce of hanging some of her own poor whites, or some innocent wandering peddler from abroad, in order to keep up a wholesome terror and ferocity toward Abolition-

No free people ever made such sacrifices of the North have for the execution of the Futhat the people of the free States are not fit | whose beauty so many have an interest. to be trusted. The manner of its execution is nothing but legalized violence. The brutality used in these secret and midnight captures, is responsible to no tribunal; nor can the question be tried whether these victims were not really free. The North furnishes the officers and the helpers to do this worka work which Southern gentlemen consider degrading. And the North pays two-thirds of the expense of these recaptures. An extra fee, even, is offered to the Commissioner for declaring the claim valid. Who ever heard of a claim brought before a Commissioner that was not valid? Although the manner of every seizure is such as to create suspicion of foul play, the law is almost invariably executed. The law is not popular. It was not intended to be. But it is executed. Must the people get down in the dust and kips the law and exalt negrocatchers who even in the South are not beld catchers who even is the South are not held ingrood odor? No other property, not even personal rights, claim or receive such extraordinary measures for their protection, as slave property has in the free States. And wat in spite of all this submission and loyable artis belief, orators come here from sufflying the ring and accuse the North of their states and use own posterior stealing the machined, and reiterate charges indicate their gwa section, to furnish food for sectional animosity in the South.

Spring Grove Cometery. Thanks to Nature, to the original Board of Directors for their good taste or their good luck in selecting a spot richly endowed with natural gifts, and to the genius of Mr. Strauch, the present Superintendent, Cincemetery in the world. Disinterested gentlemen who have seen all the famous necropolii of Europe and America, do not hesitate to pronounce our Spring Grove superior in attractiveness to the best of them, though inferior to several in extent and costliness of decoration. This is owing to two causes: the character of the ground, which is well adapted to the purpose to which it is justify and invite violence on the part of the | dedicated; and the artistic skill of Mr. Strauch, who has, it would seem, made the most of its capacity for improvement. It has evidently been the aim of Mr. Strauch not to cover up, but to interpret Nature-to bring Art to sid her in the expression of her own idea; and while keeping in view the especial purposa to which the spot is devoted, to prevent the execution of that purpose from giving it a mechanical aspect, and destroying the unity which Nature had established. Indeed, the beauty of Spring Grove consists in the fact that we are able to view it as a whole. Unlike the other rural cemeteries of the country, its subdivision into parts, the subjects of individual ownership, has been kept from attaining such prominence as greatly to mar the general affect. To this end the most irksome of the labors of Mr. Strauch have been directed; present condition. One would think that but before his zeal and his assiduity, the obstacles have one after another given way -- the ugly stone posts and grim iron railings, with which lot-owners, suffering under excellent intentions, but afflicted with terrible tastes, sought to ornament their property, are coming down; and there is reason to hope that, before long, Nature, set loose from her impediments, will be permitted to speak out with comparative freedom, in testimony of her own oveliness.

We have heard it remarked that at Spring Grove, Nature and the Superintendent had both done their duty; and that the field for criticism began with the doings of the lotowners. Nor can it be denied that there is a much more abundant exhibition of willingness to do than of knowledge how to do, on the part of this class. A taste heteroclite or uncultivated is not an offense; it is only a misfortune. It does not become offensive until its proprietor persists in adhering to his own ideas, contrary to the testimony of those whose views, from their superior opportunities and attainments, are entitled to respect. There are some such who hold property at Spring Grove; and whose bad taste being an active quality, had led them to erect original monuments to it, which are readily distinguished by all who take the trouble to examine. The greater share of the bad taste, however, is passive; leading the party to acts of imitation-generally of doubtful or meretricious models. Of this, Spring Grove has a plenty of examples, of which we do not design to speak individually in what follows, contenting ourselves with pointing out a few things by which the Cemetery, in its general effect, is injured.

To the iron and stone fences with which ome of the lots are surrounded, we have already alluded. They are gradually disappearing, and the improved aspect which is imparted to the grounds by their removal is accelerating the process. None are now being erected, and, probably, within a few years, the last will have departed. There is, however, a tendency, on the part of some, to plant prominent and, indeed, ornamental corner monuments. This, although not as bad as the stone and iron fences, is still too bad, being a marring of the general effect for the benefit of a little private vanity. In a place where stone is destined to be so plentiful, every piece that does not express a senliment or commemorate an event, should be kept out of sight. These corner monuuments need be no Wigher than the grass; and if, instead of the glassy white marble, of which they are constructed, green-stone verde antique-some thing in harmony with the covering of the soil-were employed, the change for the better would be very great.

There is reason to fear that in the process of time the Spring Grove landscape will undergo a transformation that will bring it into a close resemblance to an immense stone-cutting establishment. The tendency is to the multiplication of monuments. People have lots, they have money, they want to do semething, and they have not that taste which leads them to find their gratification in a consistent whole, rather than in the ornamentation of a particular part. They go into the stone business as if the embellishment of the Cemetery depended upon their outlays, and produce effects that people of cultivation regret, though they can not amend. Instead of the multiplication of cheap or common pieces-the mere works of the stone-cutter-it would be far better to put money into some thing which, for its massiveness or its artistic excellence, would attract the attention of the vision, and be a testimonial in favor of the erector. There are enough of mere pieces of stone at Spring Grove, already; and of course there is no demand for a multiplication merely all the safeguards of liberty, and of the uni- for the sake of numbers. They who have versally-recognized principles of legal ad- monuments to erect, can afford to wait until ministration, for the execution of a law, as they can avail themselves of the advice of persons of taste, and thereby make a real gitive-slave Law. The law itself declares addition to the attractions of a place in > Boston Business Directory. We are indebted to Mesers. Damrell & Moore and George Coolidge, of Boston, through the politeness of Adams's Express Company, for a couple of copies of the "Sketches and Business Directory of Boston and its Vicinity, for the year 1860 and 1861;" an elegant quarto volume, containing a large store of information of an interesting character about Boston, its institutions, literary > and religious, trade, commerce, navigation,

cuts, and illustrated by maps and engravings of noted places, buildings, and localities. Ir is rumored that Mayor Bishop contemplates a prosecution of the Times for libel. The offense consists in the publication of an account of the Mayor's midnight adventures with the police, which we copied for the purpose of exhibiting its unjustifiable character. The construction of the law is well established. The publication of any thing coloulated to make a person ridiculous, so as to depreciate blm in the respect of society, is just as much libelous, as to publish an attack upon his moral or business character. There made out aged a doubt that a case could be aba Times.

Hely-Stone Literature. A reverend gentleman of Newark, who describes the holy-stone figure to the Commercial, enys: "Surrounding the head, which is really well formed, are three letters, from which the word Mess or Messiah may be inferred, according to the taste or discretion of the interpreter. Moses or Messiah; a mere matter of tarte This is tolerably loose for a clergyman. It is as amiable as the accommodating phowman to the old lady who inquired which was the thinoceros and which the hippopotamus. "Vichever you please, muin; you pays your money and takes you'r choice." ACRORATIC EFFECTS OF A HOLY-STORE DIS-COVERY. Mr. W grick describes the not of discovery

as for tows:

"I dropped my spade, and picking up the stone, exclaimed: 'Here it is?' Dr. Nichols says I sprung at one leap, clear out of the hole to the top—twelve feet, exclaiming: 'I've got it.' And he, I believe, sprung clear sa the hole from where he sat to the spot where I landed."

This extraordinary muscular demonstra tion clearly proves the extraordinary nature of the discovery. Can any doubt its genuineness when it caused Mr. Wyrick to jump at one leap out of a hole twelve feet deep, with the stone box in his hands? The distance which Dr. Nichols sprung is not stated; an unfortunate omision. Let not scoffers smile at this idea of proving one wonderful thing by another, still more wonderful. The plan is as old as the world. There are few who could calmly contemplate the consequences of laying aside this system of evidence. It would dissolve the framework of society. IMPROVED ANTIQUITIES.

The words of the Hebrews inscription of the first Holy-stone discovered by Mr. Wyrick, were spaced. As spacing was quite modern, it was suggested that the inscription could not be ancient. This feature excited much criticism, which seems to have had a beneficial effect, for the inscriptions on the last discovery are not spaced. This shows that just criticism is as improving to discovery as to the other arts.

BINGULAR COINCIDENCE. The Holy-stone has a figure of a Jewish priest in his poptifical robes. The inscriptions are interpreted to be an abbreviation of the Ten Commandments, conspicuous among which is the Mosaic Law, "thou shalt not make any graven image," &c. which, it is known, the Hebrews interpreted very strictly. This seems to show that the lost tribes were as careful to commentorate a violation of the law as the law iself. DEFRECATORY.

We hope none will suppose that we mean to insinuate that the Holy-stone discoverem and interpreters are practicing a deception. They are undoubtedly as sincere as the Commercial is in its descriptions and discus-

EXTRAORDINARY SURGICAL OPERATION ON THE EYE .- One of the most singular surgical operations we have yet seen recorded, is given by the Butler (Penn.) American. It

The most delicate and important operation in ophthalmic surgery—the operation for cataract—was performed a few days since by Dr. A. M. Nevman, of our borough, upor Mr. Byers, of Fairview, and we are happy to learn, with the most flattering prospect o success. Mr. Byers has been blind for three success. Mr. Byers has been blind for three-years. The removal of the clouded lens which obstructs the sight, by the intro-duction of an instrument, and the breaking up of the membrane inclosing it, allows the substitution of an artificial lens, by the use of a sultable pair of glasses. The operation was very quietly performed, no one but Dr. Bredin, who assisted in the performance, being present.

Removal of a cataract, by mechanical means, has been long practiced, but the introduction of an artificial lens is some thing new in ocular surgery.
